Steady German Withdrawal Is Declared to Be Strategic Necessity.

Ludendorff Welcomes Offensive Which "Will Serve to Disintegrate French Forces."

Paris, Aug. 21—Gen. Ludendorff, in an order of the day of Aug. 4, atyles the steady German withdrawal as a "strategic necessity" and attributes the allied success to the surprise "in attacks beginning July 15."

The order, which was captured by the allied forces recently, says only the surprise of July 18 gave the allies any particular advantage, the attacks particular advantage, the attacks "breaking down bloodily." The German retirement was due to the needs of rear liaison, the order said.

"The Franco-British infantry gen-

The France-British intality generally operated circumspectly, Americans fighting vigorously, but less skilfully," the order related.

The whole order apparently was concocted in an effort to buck up the waning spirit of the German people. It continued:

"All sides have been heavily reinforced, but I have a feeling that from all sides the enemy's attack is viewed with some apprehension. Nothing justifies apprehension if our troops are vigilant and do their duty."

The order said the tanks won the initial successes for the allies, but maintained that they would be useless if the infantry did not let them overtake them and if the artillery was sufficiently echeloned in depth.

fake them and if the artillery was sufficiently echeloned in depth.

Gen. Ludendorff said he welcomed the offensive, which "will only serve to disintegrate the French forces." The defense was held to be a more severe test of the morale of the men than the offensive. The order was directed to be read to the troops every day.

It will probably be in complete operation Jan. 1. Actual manufacture of powder started July 3, forty-five days ahead of schedule. I had an idea powder looked like the stuff we used to squeeze out of firecrackers that hadn't exploded. Innrecrackers that han't exploded. In-stead, it looks like spaghetti—or maca-roni. While the process requires great care, the operations are simple. The ingredients are raw cotton, treated with a mixture of sulphurle and nitric acid, to make the explosive compound.
This is "colloided" with ether and alcohol. The mixture, in plastic form, is put through a machine that forms it into the spaghetti-like form. The wet mixture is then put through three wet mixture is then put through three drying processes—hot water, stean, and hot air. When dry it is grained or chopped, blended so there will be no variation in the quality, and then packed. It requires about fifteen days for the completed process from the raw cotton and acid stage to the finished product.

This is subjected to a rigid inspec-tion, and a two to three days test of actual firing in the guns for which it is intended. The Old Hickory plant has its own proving ground. Some of the guns are on hand for testing; others of larger caliber are on the way. The first lot of 250,000 pounds will go to test Sept. 1.

From this plant the powder is sent to the loading companies, where it is put into the shell cases furnished by unexpected support in the peasants, who attacked the besieging reds. Movements similar to that at Jaros-laff are beginning to brew, and all eastern and northern Russia are threatening the isolated red armies. Although the bolsheviki are spurring recruiting in the red army, the results are insufficient to meet the growing threat.

The general railroad strike in Ukraine has paralyzed the transport. While the railroad men are anti-German, they are not the cause of the present trouble, which is due to the economic disturbance caused by the German occupation. This made it difficult to pay the railroad men enough to live on, the German requisition raising the prices of necessities. If the economic difficulty is evercome, how-ever, the anti-German feeling is still sufficient to continue the strike, which is stopping German shipments from Ukraine.
